Issue Editor's Preface

A single issue of any law journal could not begin to cover completely the legal problems of agriculture. Suffice it to say they are many. However, we have brought together in this issue a variety of material which will be useful to the practitioner having clients with agricultural interests. This symposium features articles on estate planning for the farmer, farmer cooperatives, farm labor law, tax analysis, and others.

In addition we offer several timely open-topic articles discussing antitrust problems of trade associations, the effect of a general appearance after judgment, and the ramifications of Gault in California. Of special interest is the last group of student notes which deal with three pressing problems arising out of the California Tort Claims Act.

Those to whom I am deeply grateful for their help in the preparation of this issue include: Gale Guthrie, Terry Ross, and Akira Togasaki, the note and comment editors; Pete Laird, research editor and consultant on the Tort Claims Act; Jim Jackl, managing editor and issue editor of our recent symposium on Youth and the Law, for his editorial assistance on Judge Gardner's article; Dick Smith, technical editor; and numerous others, including the two whose support has been most generously given and most gratefully received: Bob Belzer, Journal member; and Gail Inlander, wife.
